Sparking Minds, Enriching Souls, Inspiring Futures

Technology and Our Children

Our children are growing up during a time where they will be using technology their whole lives but too much technology use can have detrimental effects on their mental and physical health. They may be left with dealing with increased obesity, a loss of social skills and behavioral problems. Make sure to monitor your child's social media use, the sites they are visiting and the games they are playing online. Find opportunities for your child to engage in playdates, physical activities such as sports teams so they can be social with other children. Encourage your child to unplug and play games that don't involve screens.
